To my family

to my mother who birthed me from her womb my father who nurtured me every day to my sister who carefully tended me to my grandparents who taught me to dig deep with my roots in the ground.

Dedicated to whomever's worn, warm afternoon hands come upon these pages—wherever you may find them—and that you may remember that the world is conspiring for you and to act in a manner as such.

He was a good son, a good husband, a good friend, a good judicial officer, a good citizen, and his country." So reads the text of a the cemetery of the Monastery of Santa Croce in Florence. It commemorates Gallesio, who had studied law at the University of Pavia and was elected to the Giuniori of the Republic of Genoa. He later took part in the Congress of Vienna delegation, from his state and, in doing so, successfully campaigned for the union of land with the kingdom of Piedmont-Sardinia.

After the end of his political career, Gallesio retired to his country in an incomplete Pomona italiana (an important work of pomological literature (the fruit-growing), originated on an extensive estate with the best of position of soils". Botanical illustrations from Bologna, Genoa, Florence and other creation of the watercolor illustrations, with the result that the plates are of quality. Printed in Pisa, the illustrations particularly depict numerous varieties (Prunus persica (L.) Bartsch, No. 4), vines (Vitis vinifera L.), fig trees (Ficus carica L.), apple trees (Malus domestica Borkh.). The mild climate of the Ligurian coast were also illustrations of sweet chestnut (Castanea sativa Mill.), pomegranate (Punica granatum L.), olive (Olea europaea L.), carob (Ceratonia siliqua L.), and palm (Phoenix dactylifera L.).

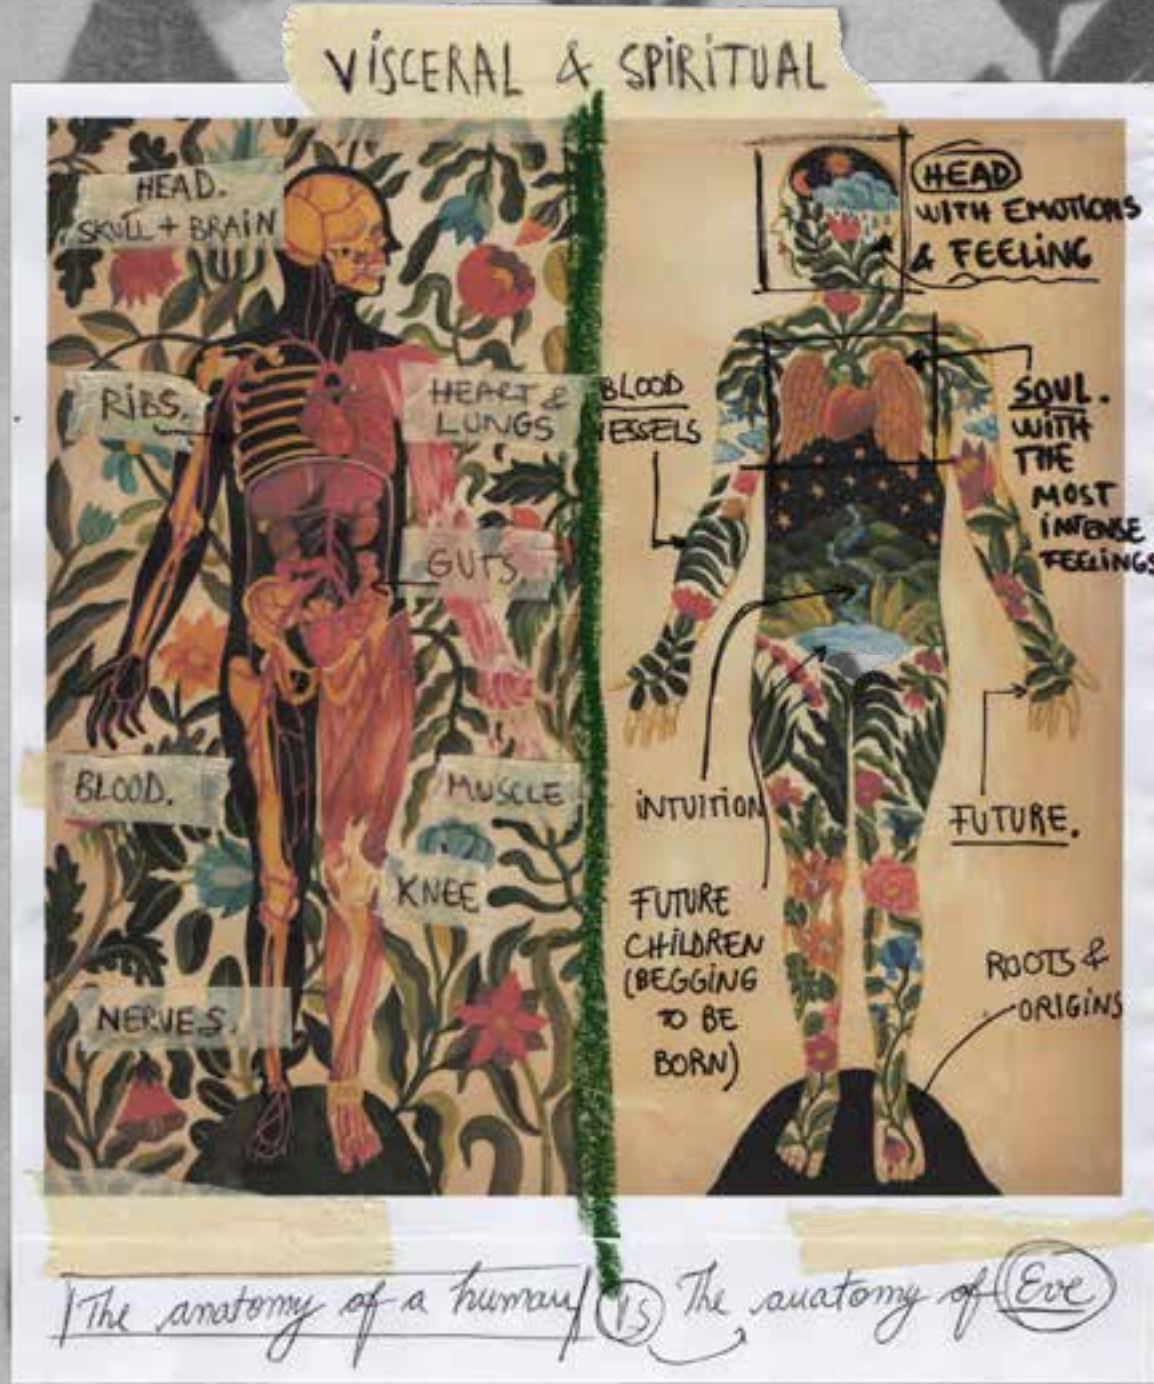

En una lápida del cementerio de Santa Croce de Florencia se lee: «Fue buen hijo, buen marido, buen amigo, buen ciudadano, y vivió por las artes, las ciencias y su país». Estas palabras, dedicadas a Giorgio, el conde que realizó estudios de Derecho en la Universidad de Pavia y formó parte del Consiglio Giuniori, la cámara legislativa de la república de Génova. Más adelante participó en el Congreso de Viena como secretario de la delegación de su país y, con ello, impulsó la unificación de Italia.

Al concluir su carrera política, Gallesio se retiró a su casa de campo de Ligúria, que quedó inacabada, es una obra importante de la literatura pomológica (con los frutos comestibles) que surgió «en una extensa finca con la mejor de los suelos más fértiles que se pueda desear». Las acuarelas son obra de distinto. Bolonia, Génova, Florencia y otras ciudades, por ello no todas las láminas presentan la misma calidad. Impresas en Pisa, las ilustraciones representan numerosas variedades de nectarinas (Prunus persica (L.) Bartsch, N.º 4), vides (Vitis vinifera L.), higueras (Ficus carica L.), manzanos (Malus domestica Borkh.). Dado el clima suave de la costa ligure, también hay ilustraciones del castaño (Castanea sativa Mill.), el granado (Punica granatum L.; N.º 3), el olivo (Olea

I'm sorry if you
couldn't find
me

I have been in the woods.

I put myself
there because I couldn't be good.
I have been running with foxes and hunting with crows.

and I have found myself
where a home
no body goes.
